Dr. J. H. H. H.

The Hatchet

being the
Year Book of Washington University

The Twelfth Annual Volume published by
The Class of 1915
Saint Louis - 1914

Foreword

High aim well directed and sustained by persistent effort ensures commensurate reward. May this issue of the "Hatchet" be not only a mirror reflecting faithfully student activities and student interests, but also be prophetic of the ambitions and aspirations of the Class of 1915 - - -

Frederic A. Hall

Acting Chancellor

Frederic Alden Hall

OUT of a deep regard for the ability of a man who, as Professor, Dean, and Acting Chancellor, has been vitally connected with Washington University for thirteen years; out of a sincere admiration for a strong, cheerful, and tender character; out of a friendship as firm and enduring as the name of Washington shall always be, the Class of 1915 respectfully dedicates this issue of The Hatchet to Dr. Frederic Alden Hall, A. M., Litt. D., L. H. D.

During his affiliation with the University, Dr. Hall has been successively, Collier Professor of Greek, Dean of the College, and Acting Chancellor. His deanship occupied the collegiate year, 1912-1913. At the appointment of Dr. Houston to President Wilson's Cabinet, Dr. Hall took his place as Chancellor, being succeeded in his own office by Dr. John L. Lowes.

Dr. Hall's sincere interest has exerted a potent influence upon Washington University; his achievements have reflected glory upon her name; his high regard for her is an inspiration to our entire constituency.

To this eminent teacher and patron of this institution, whom we love as our leader in the movement towards a Greater Washington, this volume is gratefully dedicated.

Frederic H. Hall

In Memoriam

ADOLPHUS BUSCH, donator of Busch Hall and of the Chair of German; Director of the Corporation of Washington University; benefactor of higher education and of charities both public and private, died the tenth of October, nineteen hundred and thirteen. A man of the highest ideals, he maintained a most liberal business policy, and in the pursuance of it helped to build up the industrial supremacy of Saint Louis. Mr. Busch's services to the University, both as Director and donor, are inestimable.

WILLIAM TAUSSIG, Director of the Corporation of Washington University, and former President of the Board of Education of the City of Saint Louis, died the tenth of July, nineteen hundred and thirteen. Mr. Taussig's experience in civic matters and his genuine interest in education fitted him peculiarly for the zealous support which he gave to the University.

CALVIN MILTON WOODWARD, founder of the Polytechnic department of Washington University; former Dean of the Schools of Engineering and Architecture; Thayer Professor of Mathematics and Applied Mechanics, died the twelfth of January, nineteen hundred and fourteen. Besides his actual services to the University proper, Professor Woodward conceived and carried out the idea of the establishment of The Manual Training School as a preparatory department of Washington University. His entire life was characterized by an active interest in the welfare of the student body, and up to the time of his death he was a familiar figure on the campus.

IN the death of these men, faculty and students alike have lost three friends whose places will probably never be filled. The fruits of their labors will forever stand as monuments to their memory.

Milestones of 1914

THE SCENE—in all, four acts—is laid at Washington University.

ACT I. THE FRESHMAN

Scene 1. Loitering near the archway of University Hall, early one September morning, stands "1914." Awe-inspiring, yet inwardly trembling, he is awaiting the onslaught of brawny "1913." Just as the latter emerges from the Boys' Locker Room, and the combatants, amid much excitement, are preparing for the fray, Morris Boorstin strides between them saying, "Peace! The Chancellor decrees peace!" "1914," nothing daunted, shakes his fist boldly in the very face of "1913," uttering the dire threat, "I'll fix you yet."

Scene 2. December, of the same year. The stage is deserted when the scene opens, but the sound of shouting in the distance gradually grows louder and louder as the mob comes nearer. With a final wild burst of applause, "1914" crowned with the laurel wreath of victory, is borne in on the shoulders of his comrades. "1913" follows sullenly, and takes no part in the cheering, for "1914" has fulfilled his threat, and overcome him both in Football and in the Class Fight. Yea, and has also "cut him out" in the social whirl at the wonderful Freshman Prom.

ROMEO AND JULIET—He bears him like a portly gentleman.—GAFFORD.

The Hatchet

ACT II. THE SOPHOMORE

"1914" somewhat disheartened, sits alone on the Library steps. A new rival for the honors of the University, a puny enough fellow to be sure, one "1915," who has just captured the treasured 1914 banner. The suspense is great for fear our hero may be finally vanquished—but no! He strides manfully to the Odeon, and makes a name for himself in dramatics, by taking the three leading roles in "An Enemy of the People." His supremacy is again assured.

ACT III. THE JUNIOR

Scene 1. Amid a dazzle of light and music, "1914" leads his lady to the Junior Prom. Here the Fairyland of flowers, the glory of the music, and the flutter of merry hearts proclaim "1914" the social conquerer of the University.

Scene 2. "The World and His Wife," marks a second conquest in "1914's" dramatic career, since the four main parts have been assigned to him.

ACT IV. THE SENIOR

A dignified figure, in cap and gown, marches sedately into Chapel. Who is this person? There is something strangely familiar about him. Sure enough! "1914" is a Senior whose scholarly attainments astonish the University. Yet behind his dignity lurks a merry twinkle, and, when you ask him what he is up to, he promises luncheons, parties, banquets, and, best of all, a marvelous Senior Prom, after which "1914" will bid you farewell.

HAMLET—'Tis a custom more honored in the breach than in the observance.—CHAPEL.

Junior Class History

"PAUL COSTE—of all people! How glad I am to see you. Only yesterday, I was speaking of you. I was reminiscing—trying to entertain Billy with an account of my University career, but he wasn't of our class, so of course he couldn't appreciate it.

"Can you realize that it was ten years ago that the mighty army of 1915 loomed up on Washington's horizon?

"You remember our Freshman Prom—our debut into the University society? Didn't we consider ourselves very important? And important we were, for our Prom was, to speak only modestly, a genuine credit to us and to the University.

"Then came the pole fight. I can still see the vacantly surprised expression of those 1914 Sophomores when we nimbly climbed the greased pole, and released their flag.

"Although they frequently sought to gently reprove us, we finally did agree to make friends with them, didn't we? We had our Love Fest in May, and showed in word and deed that generosity, even towards our enemies, is a virtue.

"Can you still see the group of cadaverous looking individuals who registered as 1916? Their whole bearing was that of the proverbial dog who lives constantly wondering when he is to have his day. They must surely have decided to make the day for themselves. The fight was slightly more of a man's affair than our other had been, but we had hardly expected to be fumed out, so, in a moment of liberality, we allowed them to take our flag; but, with a marked air of polite tolerance, we invited them to participate in a Love Fest.

"By the beginning of our Junior year, we, of course, had outgrown all such childish tendencies, and gave our attention to really important things. Take our Junior party for instance.

"Thank you for the reminder. I had forgotten about the Drosten Cup. We won it two years in succession, as evidence whereof, it bears 1915 in large numerals.

"No! please don't speak of our Junior Prom. Of course, it was the best the University has ever seen. It is never necessary to speak of the obvious. But I haven't time to go into details now because I must meet Billy. I am late for my appointment now. We can talk over the Senior year some other time. I do so want to hear about it. Awfully glad to have seen you. Goodbye."

A Freshmanuscript

FRESHMEN DORMS, W. U., February, 1914.

DEAR HEZ: Y' ought to see our Freshman Class; it has the bunch down at the post office beat a mile. We gave a Class dance, a Prom, and stood up to a good rough and tumble fight.

For the first dance the fellers got their girls out of a hat (drawin', you see). I got a girl who lived over by one of the Breweries—but that didn't matter, bein's I had signed a pledge. Well, it took us several hours to git out to the little Jim. The dance was already going on. I said dance didn't I?—it seemed to me they were training up for that mid-year fight. My girl said that we were doing the Tangle or something like that. I remember when I worked in the store we sold "Tanglefoot," so I thought the dance was named after that, 'cause I was always gettin' tangled up with her feet.

We hardly got over that fracas when along came the Freshman Prom. And say, Hez, we had the best "Eats." All fixed up in our Class colors, black and gold. The decorations, too, conformed with these colors; and we had a fine Electric light sign spelling "1917." Hez, do you remember how you used to feel in church when everybody stood up and sang, "My Country 'Tis of Thee" while the pictures of Washington and Lincoln were thrown on the screen? I felt something like that at the Freshman Prom. A something choked me, and a mist came over my eyes, as the whole University, a happy throng, stood in the big Jim under the streamers of gold and black, and sang "Dear Alma Mater," as the rays of the glowing 1917 shed a soft and inspiring light over all. (My English teacher writ this last.)

Well, Hez, Chapple hour is over and I have to write an English theme. Hoping that the planting is gettin' along all right without me, and that the Debatin' Society is still going fine, I remain respectfully,

Your affectionate brother,

A. GREENLEAF FRESHMAN.

HAMLET—I know the gentleman; I saw him yesterday.—JIMMY SMITH.

In Rel. the Senior Lawyers

THREE the Sun in all his glory
Hath "y' runne," and the moon,
Three long years has watched them coming,
Watched them going; all too soon
Have these boy-men reached the top rung
Of the days laid out for climbing
To the lofty heights of Story,
Greenleaf, Marshall; hoary-
Haired old Blackstone conned they,
Bispham, Cooley, Kent and Chitty,
Wizlizenus, Curtis, Keysor, and the rest
So well have taught them, that old maxim, man's protection,
"Ubi jus, ibi remedium."

Now they go forth armed for battle,
Go to mountain, hill, and valley,
Go to carve their name and "'14,"
In the Halls of Fame or—Folly.

Here you, "Percy," "Roly-Poly,"
As the years so swiftly pass,
We can't think that like old "Omar,"
You'll "turn down an empty glass."

As for "Unde," more's the pity,
'Tis a rule the Law employs,
Judge, apply "Lex Domicilii,"
He was born in Illinois.

If you'll take back from Missouri,
State of culture, State of brains,
What we've tried so hard to teach you,
We'll forgive the little things.

Now there's Beckett, "Jack" we call him,
And 'tis whispered unto me,
That a girlie's heart o'er yonder
Throbs for him in Granite Citee. (poetic license)

That is Steward, "Big" "Stoke" Steward,
Pink of cheek and large of torso,
Three long years he's sat by "Unde"
And each year he's grown much more so

ROMEO AND JULIET—Thy noble shape is but a form of wax.—PROF. JOHN HART
BROWN.

The Hatchet

What he was not in "eleven,"
When he came (would you believe us)
Innocent, and like a rosebud
Now he laughs loud and's mischievous.

But who comes there, so debonair?
No, boys, do not "demur"
"Pat" has won her "ore tenus"
That bold Sir Lochinvar.

For I've heard it in the Arcade,
And 'tis whispered in the Gym,
That a lady on the South Side,
Is very fond of him.

We like him much, "Glück auf," old "Dutch,"
You high mark man, so, so,
Where e'er you roam, (Let's blow off the foam),
May your shadow less ne'er grow.

Now who in this galaxy makes our thoughts quicken,
Any more than he does when we think of our "Chicken."
He's not very short, and he's not very tall,
He's not very fat, and not very small.

He worries o'er cases, and he worries o'er books,
He worries so much that—worried he looks,
When along comes "Mutt" Mohler, a "fine li'l, ol' feller,"
Who does two men's work without ever a "beller."

Together with "Andy" he studies to know;
With him learns the meaning of "Sic utere tuo—"
What "Andy" doesn't learn, as the swift moments pass,
He asks the professor when he comes into class.

McMullen, you say?—why, his old broad back
Will shoulder many a legal pack
For, "As sure as the vine grows 'round the stump,"
That old plugger will make things hump.

And Eschmann, his pal, who for eloquence, he
Has ne'er found his equal from sea to sea,
Will discourse ad lib., and get up again,
So constantly things are "occurring to him."

From the vine covered halls of "Old Nassau,"
Lionberger came to study the Law,
As "Special Master," he gathered in a round fee,
"Already" before he became LL. B.

HAMLET—Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.—DRUE SMALLING to Miss McCaulley.

The Hatchet

If you would have extras at death to inure
To the good wife and babes, with "Lou" Portner insure;
Lou preaches the gospel, "Protect, thou, the home"—
(And some other man will get it when you are gone.)

But who is that man going up the old stair,
With the look of dismay, and the disheveled hair,
With the "writ" in his hand that the Dean must "show, why"
His grade on the board is sufficiently high?

"By my troth," it is Roy. Three long years, o'er and o'er,
He's read big books through at one sitting or more.
To avoid "Mene, Mene, Tekel Upharsin"
Roy says man must do, by erstwhile preparation.

Now with "Okum" Gallenkamp, we all quite agree,
But not so, we think, does the "heathen Chinee,"
No "shot in the arm" will now e'er do us harm,
For "Gally" and The Hague have relieved our alarm.

No more on the wings of fancy, may we soar,
For the pipe and the coke bowl, they've removed from our door;
But Arch Gaskill don't care, so long as he's there,
When they pass out the LL. B's, the pleasure to share.

So we lift up our eyes, the future to scan,
Here's "Aloha," "Vale," "Prosit," every man
Of 1914, in Law, ably schooled—
God speed you, every one, is the wish of old Gould.

Stranger and Student

Being in the Nature of a Dialogue Concerning the Middle Year Law Class

STRANGER: "What class is this, sir?"

Student: "The Middle Year Law Class."

Stranger: "It is a pleasant looking class. The serious study of Law requires relaxation at times; what methods are used to gain this?"

Student: "The study of other subjects furnishes the needed change. For instance, A. Sloan Oliver and W. Ware Hamlin have formed a class in, 'The Study of Human Nature at First Hand.'"

Stranger: "That is a very deep and advanced study."

Student: "They get very deep in it at times, and, as for its being advanced, the fact that these students part their names in the middle, stamps it as being for 'high-brows.'"

Stranger: "What are those two students doing?"

Student: "That is De Mott Modisette and 'I Should Worry' Alch, studying 'The Law of Chances.' That, of course, has nothing to do with the 'Doctrine of the Last Clear Chance.'"

Stranger: "Who is that nodding his head sleepily?"

Student: "That is Morris Phillips; but he is not going to sleep; he is merely answering the Professor's questions for himself. All the sleeping privileges were very early acquired by Homer Eckert, who now refuses to part with a single one."

Stranger: "I see but one mustache in the class; who is wearing it?"

Student: "Ira A. Hunt is the proud possessor of the 'orpinous osculatory appendage.' The reports are, that he cultivated it to deceive the License Clerk."

Stranger: "I take it that he has matrimonial inclinations."

Student: "I fear that his inclinations have culminated in matrimonio vinculo."

Stranger: "Why are there no more?"

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL—Service is no heritage.—COMMONS.

The Hatchet

Student: "By a unanimous vote of the class, no mustaches are to be worn. You should have heard the masterly argument, in their favor, by Samuel Schefflin De Kins, our only authorized orator, who proved conclusively that a mustache is necessary to progress in the winning of the fair sex. Now we see that he was right."

Stranger: "You have two readers of Carlyle in the class."

Student: "Yes. 'Beau Brummel' Bender and 'Picadilly' Henske are the sartorial embellishments of the class."

Stranger: "From whom does the vast silence proceed?"

Student: "From William Gustave Bauman, deep in the study of Elbert Hubbard's best Essay."

Stranger: "There are several serious-looking students in the class. Why are they so dignified?"

Student: "It is the fault of their names; 'Senator' Lodge and 'Woodrow Wilson' Grant have great names to which they must live up. Ex officio, they are entirely different."

Stranger: "Who are the two large students?"

Student: "The one is 'Tubby' Graham, improperly so called; the other is 'Solly' Suppiger. The latter probably gained his weight by being raised on 'Pet' milk, but he hasn't lost any of it here, even on a changed diet."

Stranger: "If I had more time, I would like to hear more about the class. As it is, I must go, although I see a number of students of whom I have heard nothing. Perhaps when I return again I will be able to hear more of them. Good-day to you."

Student: "Good-day, sir."

HAMLET—These are wild and whirling words.—MR. FAURE'S ENGLISH.

Junior Class History

PRE-EMINENCE, distinction and novelty are terms which are synonymous with the Junior Law Class. Such a class should be marked down in history as the first ray in the dawn of a new era in legal thinking. Coming from all parts of the country (emphasis on country) this bunch of students, taken in the aggregate, would naturally remind one, not so much of Supreme Court Bench or Presidential candidate material, but of Coxey's army, bent upon the assertion of right.

Why, we even have Mesdames Sarah Ross Brown and Margaret Punch, devout suffragettes, and second only to Miss Sylvia Pankhurst as promulgators of the Doctrine of World-wide Woman Suffrage.

In league with them in their very radical views, we have Marquard Forster, advocate of Nation-wide Prohibition. It is rumored that he is contemplating running for the presidency on the Socialist ticket, as soon as Debs gets through trying.

How about "Dave" Baron, who makes a million a month as newspaper distributor. This is merely a hobby of his, and is a sort of sideline to his legal research work. "Dave" also is inclined toward the Suffrage and Prohibition movements, but "can't see" Socialism.

Aside from the Radicals we are, generally speaking, pretty sane individuals, although some of us are so extremely busy with "affaires de l'Université" that we cannot quite remember where we left off. Earle Amos has the record for changing his mind more times per minute than the cleverest chameleon can change its color.

"Poge" Lewis, incurable "snowballer;" "Bill" Ruegg, with the remarkable double D flat bass jury voice; giant "Jack" Powell, seven feet, two and three-sixteenth inches tall; "Puff" Martin, the pride of Sarah and Margaret; a couple of Thompsons—good fellows—(they bought us lunch one day at Nelson's); "Pete" Pemberton, who makes Mercury look like thirty cents in the three-hundred-yard dash; and Fred Blades, gambler and alleged murder of Mayor Miller of Pokerville, State of Eldorado, constitute another section of our motley crowd.

Next, we have those of the ultraconservative mind. Judges McKittrick (called "Red") and Neuhoff are both very capable if they have ready access to Judge Keysor for very frequent information. Attorneys Williford, Baron, Robb, Jones, Hamlin and Amos are irreproachable, however, being of the sterling C. P. Johnson-Harvey type when it comes to Criminal Law cases.

MERCHANT OF VENICE—Thou art too wild, too rude and bold of voice.—MISS MAGINN.

The Hatchet

The rest of us are each noted in a certain field, but want of space will not permit our praises.

But now, to more serious considerations. On the evening of December 10, the entire Junior Class enjoyed a banquet at Lippe's. The banquet was ended with liquid refreshments, then (for variety's sake), more refreshments. Speeches were cheap, so were stories—stories of the "smile now, laugh when you get home" type. But there were others! After the banquet, all went straight (?) home.

The Junior Class inaugurated a new idea this year which demands special mention. I refer to the Criminal Law trial, conducted throughout the year, in which Fred Blades was summoned to Court to answer to the Jury (composed of Middle Class lawyers) for the death of Mayor Miller. McKittrick and Neuhoff sat as Judges, and had a peculiarly difficult time suppressing disputes between the State's lawyers, Hamlin, Jones and Amos, and the lawyers for the defendant, Baron, Williford and Robb. The trial is as yet not completed, but so far it has been very beneficial and highly appreciated. Let's make it an annual affair.

Senior Class History

A LONG, long time ago we were really Freshmen. It was the first year that the Washington University Medical School required one year of collegiate work for admission. Our class was therefore very small, only fourteen men remaining throughout the Freshman year. Of these, nine returned at the beginning of the Sophomore year, having successfully struggled through Anatomy, and wiggled through Chemistry.

During the Sophomore year several of the class faithfully attended the "Anatomical Demonstrations" at a well-known Fourteenth Street Theatre. A short time before the Christmas Holidays, the class spent a pleasant evening at the home of Professor Terry.

At the close of this year our class numbered just eight; and some of us feared it might be even smaller. But help was near. During the last two years the Beauty, Wit and Wisdom of many schools have been added to our roll.

During the Junior year the new members of the class got acquainted, and we all accustomed ourselves to the study of the more practical side of Medicine. The Senior year finds the class writing medical abstracts, acting as assistant to the Stork, taking hospital examinations, and preparing for the State Board.

The following are our members who have taken the entire four years' work with the class at Washington. Fred Abbott, Foreman of the Gang; Allan Gilbert, Athlete and Humorist, who promises dire results should his father's profession be mentioned; Joe Bredeck, who, in spite of his nationality, spends the nimble nickel at the book store quite as often as at the bar; McLarney, the object of whose affections has changed much in the last year, from stenographers to nurses; Ora Francis, whose investigation into the "Life and Habits of the Chicken," has been confined to the "Limber Neck" and not the common Garden or Cabaret variety; Walcott Denison, the "sleepy" (among his honors Mr. Denison forgot to mention that for four years he has held the presidency of the local chapter of "The Sons of Rest"); Dave Smith, who is our only man qualified for membership in Dr. J. E. Howe's organization; and last, but not least, (in height), Jackson, the scribe hereof.

The following men have joined the class at different times during the course: George Kettelkamp, who at least has the first name of Doctor; Prof. Gesell, who, although married, has been known to flirt with a nurse, provided the anesthetic was properly applied; "Smiling Sam" Snider, who is a sure cure for the grouch; Ellsworth Moody, our eminent surgeon and pediatrician; Hebert Spencer Maxwell, famous for his daring Garrison Avenue exploits, and Arnold and Wyatt, our latest acquisitions.

Junior Class History

THE eyes of the Faculty and Students of Washington University have been upon the 1915 Medics ever since their debut into the medical student world. Probably we can not say that we have been as successful in the physical realm as some of our predecessors, but we do claim to excel intellectually. True it is, that some of our starting companions have fallen out of the race, but we have been reinforced with recruits of no mean ability.

When we gathered in the halls of the old Medical School this fall, we rejoiced to see that last year's campaign had not proved fatal to any of the veterans. On looking about us, we saw a battalion of Mizoo's sturdy intellects marching down from one flank to join us in our race to become real physicians. The recruits from Mizoo were "Sturdy" Roberts and Judy, the Football stars; "Bonny" James, "Windy" Bradford, "Doc" Colby, "Mutt" Williamson, the Bookworm, and "Musical" Muench, the Married Man. Coming in from the other flank was our sturdy Westerner from Nebraska, "Hot Air" Cramb; our physiologist, "Mr." Brown, and our literary man, Toomey.

The names and faces of the veterans are familiar to us all. There are: "It Can't Be Done" Bechtold; "Beanpole" Rose; "Fatty" Wennerman; "Kleinie" Allen; "Slick" Alsop; "Slim" Strode;; "Slewfoot" Wilkening; "Honolulu" Kuhns; "Casey" Jones; "Dr." Dixon; "Lightning" Vinyard; "Silk Hat" Squibb; "Curly" Fuson; "D'y'understand" Rossen, the Pride of South Broadway; "What-do-you-mean" Bock; "Missionary" Kellersberger; "Fusser" Langsdorf, and "Pop" Foulon.

Among the interesting things that have happened during the year may be mentioned the research work carried on by Bock. Nobody as yet has been able to find out just exactly what Bock is trying to prove. All we know is, that the dogs are going. The Married Men's Club, an organization in our class, announces with great pleasure two new additions: namely, Muench and Cramb. They also have a probate member, Langdorf. Poor Herb has so many loves that he has not been able to decide which one to choose. It is rumored that Dr. Blank and Langsdorf are to hold a secret conference to determine what hours Herb can have the stenographer without interfering with dictation. The class suggests it may be well for Kuhns to try to arrange a similar conference with Dr. T——.

ROMEO AND JULIET—I have a daughter.—MRS. WINTER.

The Hatchet

We must not fail to mention our annual class party. This was given on February 14; and everybody had a fine time. The things taught us by Drs. Schwarz and Starrs were put into practical application by a demonstration at the party. On the whole it was successful, and the class, excepting one visitor, profited very much by it.

These festivities, however, are but a relaxation from the more serious side of a medical student's life. When we realize that much of our future success depends upon what we do as Juniors, we are stimulated to stick more closely to the motto: "NOT TO SEEM, BUT TO BE."

Sophomore Class History

Five little Freshmen, as happy as could be;
"Flunk," said the Faculty, and then there were three.

IN THIS simple rhyme, gentle reader, you find depicted the horrible catastrophe that invaded our happy little family since last you read in these pages of our earnest desires and youthful ambitions.

We three lonely survivors, undaunted by our recent bereavement, continued our struggles with scalpel and scope. Being sadder and wiser, we did not "Terry" long in Anatomy, for it was here that our two brothers fell by the wayside. Nor did we "Er-linger" longer in Physiology where we were not "Garrey-lous" enough in our recitations. Impressed with the size of our class, we sought for something smaller in Bacteriology. Not finding it there, we wandered into the "Path" of a certain "ology." Finally we were "drug" through Pharmacology by Dr. Jackson and John.

Aside from these strenuous intellectual pursuits, we have found time to develop those finer personal characteristics that manifested themselves during our Freshman days. Mac's gambling tendencies again cropped out in the form of a lottery of a twenty-five-dollar, all wool suit of clothes. (Not having seen the said suit on anyone else, we strongly suspect that it reposes in Mac's own private wardrobe.) The Dutchman now calls on West Pine eight nights a week instead of seven, and Steve still persists in his attempts to break into the human race.

The only added item of interest is, that because it numbered only sixteen, we had mercy and did not haze the present Freshman Class.

Three little Sophomores, as busy as bees;
Will we ever grow up into three M. D.'s?

Freshman Class History

WHATE one September morning, fifteen men passed through the entrance of the Medical School to enroll for the Great Study. These men did not exhibit the customary awe-stricken countenances of Freshmen, for they were sophisticated. Years of pre-medical training at various Universities had removed the last trace of any verdant streak that might have characterized their persons; and consequently every one of them bore the most blasé of expressions. Realizing that those men composed the Freshman Class of 1917, and being a member of that class myself, I shall continue my tale in the third person.

It was but shortly after our matriculation that we were led to the dissecting and microscopical rooms, and assigned lessons—lessons that soon caused us to forget the surrounding busy metropolis. To say that we worked would be putting it mildly. In anatomy conferences, how we squirmed and stammered in our attempts to impart our knowledge, which was attained with difficulty! It would be painful to illustrate our mad efforts to convince the professors that we had mastered the whole medical vocabulary.

But outside of our daily relations with cadavers, skeletons and microscopes, we found ample time, you may be sure, for pleasure. The organization and support of a Y. M. C. A. was placed in the hands of our class, and we grasped the proposition with such earnest willingness that the organization exists down to the present day. And it is a great relief between classes to slip over to the rooms, and "beat" the piano, read a magazine, or even listen to a lecture.

Early in December we elected big "Pop" Ranson as our President, mainly because he could lick any two men in the class. Thus, we were assured of order. From this last confession you might assume that we are not a very gentlemanly bunch! Perhaps, too, you saw us together on the night of the Freshman-Sophomore fight! On that occasion, of course, every one was feeling unusually "good." There was a decided need for some one to keep order. It was our first social gathering, and we made the most of it. We all assembled in "Pop's" room at the "Dorms," which was literally overflowing with "foods and liquids." To narrate what followed would require several volumes entitled, "Jokes, Speeches and Tricks," by the Frosh Medics.

The first trimester rolled quickly by, and in spite of the countless number of pitfalls and traps which the Faculty persisted in setting for us, we took (most of us, at least) broad enough leaps to get across without falling in. If we continue to labor as we have done in the past, we shall be rewarded by gaining entrance to our new medical buildings next September.

Senior Class History

IT WAS a cold, bleak day in October, when the call came for recruits for the Dental School. Many sons of Mother Earth responded. We were a goodly crowd, gathered there in the hall awaiting the first orders of Dean Kennerley. All of us seemed to be nervous and timid; but, as the years passed by, this timidity wore off, and we now look upon ourselves as bold "Soldiers of the Infirmary."

Our first order for the week was, "Pay your tuition!" Our first duty was to become acquainted with our various implements of war. Both were hard things for new men to do, but both have been made easy by constant practice. As thick-headed "Red Necks," we were put to work on the impression tray, and bee's-wax, until gradually we began to see what was wanted of us.

It soon became apparent that we needed some kind of head; but the head subsequently chosen proved to be more of a "nut" than a head, being yours truly. Our noble band, forty-seven in all, was discovered to be a very mild and gentlemanly bunch. We were not molested by the upper classmen at all, because of our great size and quantity. As the weeks passed by, we were given nights off, and immediately set about looking for places of amusement. The greatest magnet proved to be "Dreamland."

In our second year we were led by Elder. Great to our sorrow we had thrust upon us Kane, Creegan and Mack, who turned out, however, to be human. Thus the Junior year ended with very little excitement. The quiet was broken only by a dance at the Westminster. At last came the year in which all of us were classed as Seniors. Our number has been reduced to forty-three, but we have still the same old stand-bys. Baber is now our leader, but besides the presidency, "Dad" hold the office of "Chief Face Maker," and affords amusement for everyone. We are also blessed by the constant duels between Conrad and Simmons. Furthermore, the "Lab," as we all know, has been made gay by the religious outbursts of "Dutch." But aside from these frivolities, our class has not wasted the precious hours that mark the road to the goal of "Doctor of Dental Surgery."

Junior Class History

AT THE sight of the "Red Necks" entering school last fall, we began to fully realize that we, the Class of 1915, were Juniors, and that it was up to us to assume the upper classman air of superiority. About the first happening of any importance was the election of officers, after which we prepared a set of "Regulations for the Freshmen." These were imparted to the lower classmen, and we feel that they have profited by the experience of their superiors.

Although we have lost several men since last year, we now have thirty-two members, the latest additions being Gillespie, Murdock, White, and Hanoka.

Our college days are now more than half over, and while we may not have risen to the expectations of our Professors, we trust that another year will find us nearing the much coveted goal.

During the year it seems that such intimacy has grown up among the "Moss Backs" as to result in the formation of cliques or clubs, much to the disapproval of our Dean. The following bit of news has never before been published, but we think that the offenders should be exposed at this time:

ROMEO AND JULIET—Holy St. Francis, what a change is here.—FRESHMAN CLASS AFTER MID-YEAR'S.

Chronicle of the "Red Necks"

AND it came to pass that on the twenty-ninth day of September, nineteen hundred and thirteen, John, Ruler of the Land of Dentistry, called his children once again to him for another year. And in great multitudes came they from many cities of the land, and from other states and foreign countries, yea even from East St. Louis did they come.

2. John, the Ruler, saw them and was pleased.

3. And among those who came were certain ones whom their brothers called "Red Necks," who had not dwelt with him before. The Ruler welcomed them, and bade them be among his children. They heeded him, and took up their abode.

4. Now the "Red Necks" saw many strange things. And they trembled at the wisdom and strength of those called upper classmen; and when they beheld Juniors they hated them straightway.

5. And all was peace in the Land of Dentistry.

6. And it came to pass that one morning when the "Red Necks" entered the Temple of Learning, they beheld wicked writings on the walls.

7. And there was great consternation in the minds of the "Red Necks."

8. And the writings advised that the "Red Necks" should adorn themselves in green caps by the tenth day of the following month.

9. Notwithstanding these writings and many threats of punishment, the "Red Necks" continued on their sinful way.

10. And the tenth day of October did draw nigh.

11. Now a big gathering did the "Red Necks" have and elected their class officers.

12. And the leader of the class did say, "Ye shall not wear caps."

13. And lo! they did not wear caps.

14. So it came to pass that on the tenth day when the "Red Necks" returned to the Temple of Learning, they returned in a multitude.

15. And upon drawing nearer to the building they saw a host of great and wicked looking Juniors.

HENRY IV.—Some six or seven Freshmen set upon me.—FRESHMAN WALL.

The Hatchet

16. Then the leader of the Juniors enticed his followers to attack the meekly approaching forces.

17. Whereupon the sons of Pittsman fought valiantly.

18. Now as the battle raged, many strange sights were beheld. Burly Juniors were being reposed upon by the meek "Red Necks."

19. And the street was swept by the garments of the warriors, and much hair and blood were shed.

20. Full thirty minutes did go by when John, the Ruler, came out and commanded both forces to withdraw.

21. Whereupon both forces did withdraw, and the strife was ended.

22. So it came to pass that the "Red Necks" did not wear caps.

23. And yea, verily, there was much rejoicing in the abode of the new comers.

24. Now all went well in the camp of the "Red Necks" until one barbarian, Frenchy by name, did attack some of his neighbors.

25. Great fear reigned, until one Issie did pounce upon him, and, with threats to disembowel him, did frighten him severely. Then peace settled upon the rejoicing throng.

26. Much happiness was abroad. For the time of departure for the Christmas Holidays was at hand.

27. Now the "Red Necks" were anxious to visit once again the people of their own blood. So they did leave for home early.

28. Now it came to pass when the Holiday was over, the great teachers demanded an insight into the amount of their pupils' learning.

29. But lo, there was great solemnness abroad.

30. And when the tests of mental strength were over, there was much weeping and wailing. And many felt the lack of strength.

31. But it came to pass that all did get through, and then were they happy and rejoicing.

32. And with much happiness straightway did they prepare for the oncoming labors.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA—No space of earth shall sunder our two hates.—DOROTHY CALMAN AND JESSICA YOUNG.

The Art'ist'ry

YOU people on the Hill know us best, perhaps, for our pretty girls. You must, I think, concede our eminence on that score. For the benefit of the Freshmen, however, I shall mention a few of them. There is, first, the Venus, whom you have proceeded to deify, and whom you now worship, considerably. There is a little brunette, whom we call "the Rogue," and who graces every social affair here. There is Emmy—you all know Emmy—who lives up at McMillan, hails from the Sunny South, and tramples hearts right and left.

Then there's "Jim-Jam Josephine," ("Sagebrush Sal," for short), who blew in from Arizona a few months ago. We accused her of toting a Colt's .45, but her armament turned out to be a sack full of Cupid's darts. They've been felt as far up-hill as Student Life office.

I could write about girls all afternoon (and the girls would like to have me do it), but there are other things to tell you of.

"Foist-off," as they say in New York, there's the Art Students' Association, which aims at uniting the art students, fostering school spirit, and encouraging good work by offering scholarships. As a sort of side-line, it initiates new members, with a ceremony which is surpassingly thorough, searching, and strenuous. With the possible exception of the Architects' ritual, we consider it the last word in initiations. The annual banquet is another function of the Association which we all encourage. Remembrances of these spreads are among the happiest of my stay within these sacred (but not over-substantial) walls. The last one was held at the close of school, last June. We assembled about the festive board (or rather, boards, for I helped to nail 'em together) and occupied ourselves in the approved fashion for two hours. After we had toasted each other (in aqua pura) we listened to talks by Mr. Saunders Norvell, Professor Holmes Smith, and Mr. Wuerpel.

We didn't have a cabaret show—not quite—but when the tables were cleared we were entertained by a cleverly-costumed Chinese play, given by a number of art students. Following this (it was quite an Oriental evening) the ever-comic Architects appeared as "Ling Foo and His Company of Chinese Magicians," and for a half-hour they indulged in mystifications which challenged the sharpest observation. And we danced, of course. Matter of form, you know, and we kept it up till the wee sma' hours.

We gave also, during the year, a series of informal monthly dances, as some of you know.

In conclusion, let me say that we are very fond of our work down here; as much so as you can be of yours. And our work is necessary, and of importance. Does not the world owe even its clothes and its wall paper to the artist? Kindly elevate your hats.

—P. C.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM—His speech was like a tangled chain.—HUNTER JONES
 AND ALLEN JEHL.

General Statement

WHEN, in 1885, Mr. Henry Shaw proposed to the Corporation that the latter establish a Department of Botany, and very generously offered to endow it and to affiliate it with the Missouri Botanical Garden, the present Henry Shaw School of Botany was founded. Later, at the death of Mr. Shaw, the field of instruction was broadened, through the additional endowment fund provided for in his will. Today the school enjoys a staff of instructors and material facilities for research that enable its curriculum to include practically all phases of botanical science.

Review of the 1913 Football Season

WHEN Coach Edmunds came to Washington at the beginning of the 1913 season, the prospects of a winning team were small. Graduation and injuries had removed six of the previous year's best men, and practically a new line had to be formed. Big men were scarce, and the players reported late in the season for first practice. Despite these difficulties, Coach Edmunds collected a team, and, by working early and late, brought them into shape to play the first game with Kansas University at Lawrence. Shurtleff had been scheduled, but the game was called off. The team found itself opposed by a rank of giants, and outweighed as much as thirty-five pounds per man. The Kansans effectively employed the Minnesota shift during the first half, but used straight football for the rest of the game. Though the team lost, not a man on it gave less than the last ounce of effort in him, or fought harder at the opening of the game than during the last play.

HENRY IV.—Oh, such a day, so fought, so followed, and so fairly won.—FLAG SCRAP.

The Hatchet

The second game was against Ames. The score was tied for the first half, but although Washington went in with a rush at the beginning of the second period, Ames' superior weight wore the team out, resulting in a last-quarter defeat.

The Westminster game, next in order, gave us an opportunity to play men of our own weight, and the result was all that could be wished.

The Drake game should have been ours, but hard luck of all sorts followed the team. Although it was admitted that our men outplayed their opponents consistently, the breaks in luck favored the Iowans, and we lost. The line played its best game at Drake, but to no avail.

The Rolla game was another fourth-quarter loss. Inferior weight and a deficiency of substitutes caused our defeat. During the first three quarters Rolla earned every inch she gained, but the fourth saw the collapse of an exhausted line, and the game was gone.

The Mizzoo game, last of the season, was a repetition of former defeats. The score was 0 to 0 at the end of the first half. Mizzoo scored during the third quarter, and in the fourth, the Myrtle and Maroon, weakened by hopeless pounding at the up-state line, could no longer hold off the Tigers' bucks, and the game went to our opponents.

The stars of the back field were Captain Hardaway, Milford, Potthoff, and Lewis. The best playing in the line was done by Gray, Perrings, Ranson and Berry.

Captain Hardaway (who is 22 years old, and weighs 143 pounds)

played a dashing and brilliant game, despite the fact that he suffered from injuries, of one sort or another, nearly the whole season, and often played on his nerve alone. His running and open-field work were his forte, rather than generalship. Milford and Potthoff proved as good a pair of backs as any in the Conference, though they were handicapped by the weakness of the line. The former played at quarter during Hardaway's illness, and displayed a great deal of football sense and headwork. Potthoff was Washington's most dependable ground-gainer, and played to the last ounce of strength at all times. Lewis, one of the heavier men, was a strong line-plunger, and his kicks and forward passes were almost unfailingly effective. He might have shown greater snap and vigor, however. His weight was 155.

Gray, the youngest man on the team, proved to be a deadly tackler, as well as clever at interference. Perrings, at 150 pounds, sustained his reputation for dropping runners and getting down under punts. Although he was not in the best of condition, he showed flashes of brilliant form. Ranson's 180 pounds of bone and muscle made him the hardest charger in the line, and seldom failed to open a hole if there was a weak spot in the enemy.

Steward, who finished the season at center, after illness forced Jehle to withdraw, played a steady game, passing with consistent accuracy and guarding well. His playing weight was 185 pounds. Graham played a

MACBETH—Thou play'd most foully for it.—AMES.

The Hatchet

gritty and aggressive game at guard, and, with Steward and Ranson, held the middle of the line against plunges.

Scherer's work was brainy, and his power tremendous, but he was handicapped for a time by poor condition, brought on by overwork in his studies. His 180 pounds were of much value in a line so slight as ours.

Berry, weighing 143 pounds, received forward passes well, at end, and proved to be a sure tackler. The little Soph is going to make things hum in the Conference next year. Watch him.

Hetlage, who, as substitute back, had shown such promise in the preceding year, was under difficulty because of a severe injury to his shoulder early in the season. Sure tackling and grit were among his assets.

Ross displayed the best possible spirit in coming out from the Dental School every afternoon and giving all he had all the time. Such men as he do much for the Varsity's success.

Werner, a first-year-man on the squad, worked faithfully and should, with a bit more experience, make a first-class linesman.

Kammerer, another new man, played an excellent guard, and should show well next year.

Coleman, another Dent, was one of the most spirited players on the squad. He is exceptionally fast, and will be of great value in the next two campaigns.

Jehle commenced the season at center, but, about half-way through, was incapacitated by injuries. He will probably be next year's middleman.

KING LEAR—The little dogs, they bark at me.—THE ARTHUR frankfurters.

The Hatchet

The men who made the Scrubs attack most troublesome were Pember-ton, Martin, Meyers, McFarland and Busiek. Anderson, Bubb, Suck, Bryan, Green, Newport, Bliss, Bushman, Horn, Eames, Stilwell and Lillingston deserve mention for their work, which was always conscientious and in many cases promising.

Associated with these men during every movement of the season was the Coach, Dr. Edmunds, who it must be said has during his year's residence at Washington, won the heart and esteem of every man who has worked for him on the field, or has seen him from the grandstand. The introduction of the Assistant Coaching System was a successful innovation, and will be continued. Leo McCarthy, the center of the Varsity in 1910, 1911 and 1912, served admirably as Dr. Edmunds' lieutenant. He drilled the scrubs in their attacks against the Varsity, and his previous experience enabled him to coach the first team's line for the big games.

Under the new regime a very noticeable feature has been the added interest which the men are taking in their work. Practice has begun earlier, a larger squad has been recruited, and the mechanism of the team has been more systematic than in several years. The men have been imbued with an aggressive fighting spirit which augurs well for the team's success in the future.

Ulrich Potthoff will be the next season's captain.

SONNET—In sequent toil all forwards do contend.—BASKETBALL SQUAD BEFORE KANSAS GAME.

Review of the 1913-14 Basketball Season

ALTHOUGH the Washington team was not so fortunate as to win all of the games on the schedule, yet the local Basketball season of 1913-'14 was a very successful one. Coach Edmunds developed one of the fastest and pluckiest teams this year that Washington has ever had; it put up a good exhibition at all times.

The season opened in January with a few games preliminary to the regular Conference schedule. The Varsity won these earlier games by large scores, despite the fact that Capt. Maenner was declared ineligible until February. After a vacation of a week during which time the team took the Midyear exams, the men left for Columbia where the first two Conference games were played. Here the team met its first defeat, owing chiefly to the fact that most of the players were seized with stage fright. However, the men regained confidence and reversed the score on the following night. Washington left for Kansas with one victory to her credit. At Lawrence the team met the fast and open style of play, and being unable to maintain the pace set by the speedy Jayhawkers, lost twice.

Shortly after the return of the team to St. Louis, Kansas paid her return visit, and again succeeded in winning two games. Next came the Kansas Aggies. Washington divided honors with them, each team winning a game, in two of the most brilliant contests ever played in Francis Gymnasium. The following week Washington ended her season in the most pleasing manner by walloping the Tigers in a decisive fashion in two of the roughest games ever witnessed in St. Louis. Washington, although a great deal lighter than Missouri, outplayed her opponents at every stage of the game.

Kansas, by taking four straight from the Missouri and three out of four from the Kansas Aggies, besides four from Washington, won the title for the Missouri Valley Conference.

Much of our success is to be ascribed to Captain Ted Maenner, who, as a three-year veteran, imbued the men with spirit and confidence, sacrificing much of his time in perfecting the unity of the team. Ted's work at guard is to be heartily commended. His spirited play gave confidence to his teammates.

Eugene French, the regular right forward, played a consistently fast and aggressive game throughout the season. He repeatedly broke away from the best of the Conference guards for sure and sometimes spectacular shots. He was without doubt the most accurate shooter on the team. This was French's first and last year on the squad. The Coach will probably have trouble in finding his equal as a shooter and floor man.

Frank Berryhill, a veteran of two years ago, was the team's main reliance in offensive play. "Berry" was of the "bruising" type of player, and bored his way through the opposition, nursing the ball along with him. As a floor man he was indefatigable, and could be found always in the midst of the struggle, and never failed to keep life and pep in the team. For some unexplained reason he showed only flashes of the brilliant shooting which made him such a dangerous man two years ago. However, Berryhill was the individual star of the team, and was on a par with the best in the Conference.

De Mott Modisette, the rangy center, showed a great improvement over his work of the year before. The uncertainty and lack of confidence which formerly hampered him had entirely disappeared, and instead he proved to be a hard and earnest fighter. As a sensational shot, "Moddy" was just as good as ever and it is hoped that his next season's work will show the elimination of his one fault, so common to most of the men this year, lack of team work. He proved the individual star of both Mizzoo games, placing basket after basket from the most difficult positions, and his brilliant playing did much to earn his next year's captaincy.

William Berry, the only real newcomer on the team, broke in at right guard and easily lived up to all expectations of him. Although naturally a forward, "Bill," when placed at the guard position quickly adapted himself to his surroundings and played an exceptionally fast and aggressive game. His occasional shifts to the offensive resulted in not a few points for the team. He is easily one of the best men discovered in recent years and he is looked upon to develop within the next two years into one of the best players to be found in the Conference.

Edwin Donk, utility guard and forward, had little opportunity (because of injuries sustained during the middle of the season) to show the form he displayed during the season before. He was a fast man and hard worker. Donk deserves great credit for playing against the odds he faced.

Paul Coste, substitute guard, is a Junior who is counted upon to be a regular next year. His smashing play combined with speed is his great asset. For a man playing the game for his first year, Coste's work was good.

Manager Charles Gallenkamp, George Scherer, and John Crocker had little opportunity to get in many of the games. Crocker, who will be the only one of the trio to return next year, is expected to prove a reliable forward.

Altogether the season was a very satisfactory one from a Washington point of view. The disappointment over losing third place in the Southern Division of the Conference, by a one game margin, to the Kansas Aggies was almost balanced by the team's victory over the old rival, Missouri. Kansas University's team, probably the best quintet ever seen here, won first honors.

Prospects for next year are somewhat dimmed by the graduation of Berryhill, Maenner, French, Donk and Gallenkamp, but Coach Edmunds expects to model a winning combination from his younger crew.

De Mott Modisette has been elected Captain for 1915.

CHARLES O. GALENKAMP, Manager.

The Missouri Valley Track Meet

ONE of the greatest successes in Washington's athletic history was consummated in 1913 when the local representatives succeeded in bringing to St. Louis the Missouri Valley Conference Track and Field Meet as an annual event. The authorities of the Conference, realizing the advantages offered by St. Louis' central location, as well as the facilities of Francis Field and Francis Gymnasium, settled upon this as the best place in the Valley for the big meet. Accordingly, on May 31 the Stadium was the scene of the first of the series of annual carnivals.

In order to make this yearly meet an event of more scope than a mere conference affair, the management will annually issue invitations to all Colleges and Universities in the western part of the country. The initial meet drew entries from twenty-five schools; and, occurring simultaneously with the big eastern event in New York, it offered a good comparison to the work of the eastern collegians.

With such men as John P. Nicholson, of Missouri; John Case, of Illinois, and Gage Stahl, of Drake, it gave St. Louisans the best athletic program they had had the opportunity to witness since the World's Fair in 1904, when the Olympic games were held on the same field.

KING LEAR—Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy can buy this unprized precious maid of me.—FRESHMAN, drawing for girls.

Review of 1913 Track Season

FROM the opening of the Track season the Missouri Valley Conference Meet loomed large upon the horizon and Coach Cayou's efforts were directed toward the development and conditioning of the team for this event. Dual meets with Rolla School of Mines and Knox College were also in prospect when the Coach called out the squad.

In order to stimulate interest and draw out men for the team, a silver loving-cup was offered to the winner of a series of three cross-country runs. All three were won by Winfree; Cope and Stout finishing second and third each time.

Washington entered a relay team composed of Moreell, Gray, Maenner and Winfree for the annual M. A. C. Indoor Meet at the Coliseum on March 15, but the team failed to place. Early in April the same men were sent to Des Moines to run in the Invitation Relay Carnival at Drake University. In this meet, also, the team failed to score.

Shortly after the team returned from Des Moines, Moreell, one of the best quarter-milers ever produced by Washington, was so unfortunate as to strain a ligament in his ankle. In consequence of the injury he was unable to take further part in track work during the season. As though the loss of Moreell were not sufficient ill-luck, Jim Gray, another good 440 runner suffered a similar injury but a few days later.

Without Moreell and Gray Washington found herself seriously handicapped for the meet with Rolla at Francis Field on May 3. By a break of good luck, however, Washington took the last two events of the program beating Rolla by a score of 57 to 52. Cowman starred conspicuously for Rolla, and Modisette proved to be Washington's best point-winner.

The next meet of the season was held at Galesburg, Ill., on May 10, with Knox College. Godwin was our only man to take first place, and the team lost by a score of 69-32. Moreell gamely tried to get on the field again, but for a second time injured the ligament which had formerly been strained, and was put out of the running for the rest of the season.

On the "big day" of the Missouri Valley Conference Meet, Coach Cayou entered all available men, but, against the stars from other schools who filled the entry lists, Washington was only able to win six points. Godwin took second in the Broad Jump and tied for fourth in the Pole Vault. Ted Maenner captured third place in the High Hurdles. Keysor ran a good race in the 440 yard event, but could not place. Despite the failure of Washington to make a creditable score, the holding of the meet here was a considerable advertisement of the school, and undoubtedly served to impress other institutions, and the general public.

Baseball Squad

BASEBALL, as a Varsity sport, was revived in 1914, after a three years' lapse. Although no games had been played at the time when the HATCHET went to press there was every evidence of a successful season. The schedule contained the name of but one Conference team, the Kansas Aggies, Coach Edmunds preferring to send his men against less expert teams during the initial campaign. Next year, it is said, a regular Conference schedule will be drawn up.

Review of the 1913 Tennis Season

TENNIS was not a big issue at Washington during the year just past, and no great success was achieved in that department. A tournament was started early last spring in which, for a time, considerable interest was manifested. But as the season wore away and Commencement drew near, the enthusiasm waned. With the semi-finals and finals still unplayed, the participants, one by one, forfeited their matches, until the tourney was called off with the championship undecided.

The Myrtle and Maroon representatives in the Missouri Valley matches, at Lawrence, Kansas, on May 20 and 21, were George Jackson, Otto J. Wilhelmi, Jr., and Joseph Patton. Examinations prevented Charles Gallenkamp's participation, while Roland Hoerr, Washington's expert racquet man, was declared ineligible just before the event. The Washington team lost all of its matches in both singles and doubles. The loss of Wyatt Brodix, who had performed so well in 1912, was keenly felt. The Conference championship went to Missouri.

Women's Athletics

THE chief departments of Women's Athletics are those of Basketball, Tennis, Floor-work, Aesthetic Dancing, and Fencing. This year, Baseball has been added, and, to judge from present indications, is likely to prove a highly successful innovation. A considerable impetus has been given to Women's Athletics by the passing of a Faculty rule that requires all Freshman and Sophomore girls to do gymnasium work. In addition to this, Y. W. C. A. members have been given permission to participate in the annual McMillan May Day celebration; an increase of interest in aesthetic dancing has been the result.

Basketball and Tennis occupy the places of most interest to the girls. The Basketball championship of the College is decided by contests between class teams. During this year the Freshman Class was not represented in this tournament, but the Sophomores placed two teams on the floor, as against none last year. Women making the class teams are allowed to wear their numerals on their sweaters, but no especial distinction is given the winning team beyond that of having its numerals engraved on the Association Basketball Cup.

Tennis matches are regularly played between picked teams from the classes. The winners of these matches are awarded medals.

The individual Woman's Tennis Championship is an annual affair. The champion has her name engraved upon a handsome cup presented by Mr. Robert S. Brookings. It is unfortunate, however, that during the season of 1913 rainy weather prevented the playing of either series.

Classes in floor and apparatus work are conducted throughout the year, and an Interclass Indoor Meet is held each Spring. Pole climbing, rope climbing, ladder work, and the use of flying rings are features of this event, which was won this year by the Class of 1914.

The newly-adopted game of Baseball is proving very popular with the girls. The usual equipment and rules of Indoor Baseball are employed. The diamond is laid out in chalk on the Gymmie floor, which lends itself admirably to the fine art of sliding for bases, and the girls proceed to "lam 'em" into the balcony, or to pop high fouls, to the no small damage of the electric lights. Even girls, batting cross-handed, or, sometimes, one-handed, cannot fail to connect with the large indoor baseball, and the scores piled up are something to make a mere man's eyes bulge.

The athletic season closes with a banquet at which numerals are awarded, the season reviewed, and officers chosen for the ensuing year.

MACBETH—And she goes down at twelve.—RUBY SPURLOCK to the Arthur.

Thyrsus Review

THOSE who witnessed the production of "The Gunmen of New York" last May were of the unanimous opinion that Thyrsus had "outmelodramered even melodrama." All the parts in the play seemed to have been written especially for the people who acted them; indeed, the whole piece was a "home product," since it was written, you know, by two of Thyrsus' own playwrights, Eugene Smith and Ralph Mooney. As a melodrama, it was well constructed; as comedy, it afforded endless amusement.

Mr. Ramsay—to treat the cast "in order of first appearance"—more than realized the conventional possibilities of Otto Goetze, the long mustachioed villain. Mr. Cann, who carried off the Jerusalem honors so successfully in "The Night Riders," was even funnier as Isadore Ogiess. The character of the hero, "Jim the Prince," would not have been half so effective without Mr. Amos' serious demeanor and deep voice. As for the heroine, Miss Taylor made a realistic Mary O'Toole, always working in harmony with the hero. Dolores—what a name for a villainess!—found an excellent interpreter in Miss Perham; the latter was, perhaps, the best among the women. Mr. Berry, as Mick McGlick; Mr. Smith, as Dopey Mike, and Miss Watson, as Mrs. Mulvaney, succeeded in giving the necessary "Bowery" atmosphere to the whole piece.

The first, and only, monthly play this year was "Mollentrave on Women," which was presented on the third and fourth of December. The part of Mollentrave, the old man who tries to bring the lovers together, was most excellently acted by Mr. Sommers. Miss Stevens, as the widow, had a very pleasing stage presence; her voice and bearing showed exceptional ability. Mr. Preston played the comedy role of Lord Contareen consistently, acting and looking the Englishman's part. The work of Miss Lucas and Mr. Allen was not so good as the rest; both came out of their parts, though at times each showed flashes of sincerity. Mr. Meier, as the English lawyer, Sir Joseph Balstead, is to be commended for his acting; but his voice was not effective. Miss Jennings, Miss Bacon, Mr. Suck and Mr. Larkey were pleasing, but their parts were too meagre to afford opportunity for able work.

WINTER'S TALE—She is spread of late into a goodly bulk.—EMMA VOGT.

"The Love Star"

"THE LOVE STAR," produced by Quadrangle Club on the evening of March 19, was at once a success and a failure, according to the point of view. On the one hand, it was notable for the excellence of its music, the cleverness of its book and lyrics, and the able business management which succeeded in entirely filling the big Odeon. On the other, it was notable for weakness of acting, dearth of humor and clumsiness of stage management.

But even though "The Love Star" failed to realize the possibilities of its romantic, albeit loosely constructed, plot, it surpassed all previous productions in the dancing, the number of song successes, and the spirited attack of the chorus. Miss Senta Retter's "Dance to the Love Star" and "Skull Dance" have never been equalled here for exquisite grace of movement. Of equal merit was the singing of Miss Marie Gallenkamp. As the dainty heroine, Zayda, she won applause from her first appearance; in the "Lullaby" the sweet tones of her clear voice showed to even better advantage than in the delightful strains of her "Entrance." The "Love Moon" scored a hit despite the bungling of the lyrics; and the "Devilish Dervish Dance" and the "Ragtime Melodrama Show" were as effectively presented as they were original in conception. The former, because of the eccentric, whirling steps that accompanied it, was undoubtedly the feature hit of the show. Two of the most tuneful songs, "The Language of the Flowers" and "The Moorish Tango," being poorly presented, were lost to the audience. No fault can be found, however, with the work of the chorus; it was full of vim and snap, decidedly in contrast with the general spirit of the acting.

Except for Mr. Eugene Smith, as Muley Mahmed Adballah, the prophetic expounder of rimed truths, and Mr. Kendall Harrison, realistically inactive as Duke Fernando, few of the principals succeeded in realizing their parts in the melodramatic plot. Consequently the underlying story fell in interest as it progressed. Carter Lawrence, the dauntless hero, became a vaudeville comedian in the hands of Mr. Wyatt Brodix; the latter's improvised humor was decidedly out of place. Don Garcia, played by Mr. Percy Ramsay, was hardly a sufficient villain. And Mr. Ralph Mooney failed to make a comedian out of Lope Sanchez, for all his loud laughter. Miss Helen Bryars, however, played the role of Tia Infanta with extreme cleverness. The parts of Zayda and Carmencita were carried off well enough by Miss Gallenkamp and Miss Retter.

Altogether, "The Love Star" was a play of possibilities, some of which were realized, but the most of which were lost in the hurried preparation of the performance.

Glee and Mandolin Clubs' Tour

DURING the Christmas Holidays the Glee and Mandolin Clubs undertook a tour of Missouri, giving seven concerts in six cities. Jefferson City was played December 31, 1913; Sedalia on January 1, 1914; Warrensburg on January 2; Kansas City on January 4; Carthage on January 6, and Springfield on January 7. Verne W. Gould acted as business manager of the combined Clubs; Moulton Green directed the Glee Club, Clifford Taussig the Mandolin Club, and Mr. Glenn Lee, the Glee Club trainer, traveled with the clubs.

The party of thirty-seven men, all told, left Union Station at 9:00 on the Missouri Pacific for Jefferson City. They occupied a private Pullman, which was exchanged at Jefferson City for a more commodious one. Green and Martin Harris did not get to Union Station in time for the train, and were forced to take it at a small suburban station outside town. At Jefferson City the Clubs lunched, then went to the State Capitol and the State Supreme Court Building, in each of which they sang selections. At the State House Governor Major greeted the boys. Later in the afternoon the Governor and Mrs. Major entertained the Clubs at a dance in the Gubernatorial Mansion, where members of the younger set of Jefferson City were present. The opening performance at the Jefferson Theatre that evening was played before a large and enthusiastic audience. Their appreciation did much to encourage the Clubs for the remainder of the trip.

MACBETH—'Twas a rough night.—GLEE AND MANDOLIN CLUBS AT CARTHAGE.

The Hatchet

A night run was made to Sedalia, which town the boys found even more to their liking than Jefferson City. Both afternoon and evening performances were given and the Clubs found time for a tango tea at the home of Mrs. Farley, a reception, given by Dr. Woods, and a stupendous New Year's Dinner at the Hotel Terry. The Clubs went to dinner en masse, in evening clothes, and won great applause from other diners by several songs during the progress of the feast.

On leaving Sedalia the Club car was routed, by mistake, to Warsaw, Mo. When the mishap was rectified the boys found themselves some hours late. Upon reaching Warrensburg they hurried, sans breakfast, to the State Normal School, where they sang for some time before the assembled pupils.

Having moved two pianos from basement to third floor, and rehearsed all afternoon, the Club was in excellent trim for the evening concert. One thousand and fifteen people heard the concert (Warrensburg is a town of about four thousand), standing room was sold, and the show was pronounced the best ever seen there.

Saturday morning saw the Clubs in Kansas City, where, at the Densmore Hotel, an opportunity for much-needed rest was available. After a day of pleasant loafing, the Clubs dined, sang for the Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, who was stopping at the Densmore, and then went out to the Westport High School, where a small but very appreciative audience greeted them. Numbers of Washington people were to be seen in the auditorium. The next day, Sunday, was one of continued rest, sight-seeing, and visits to friends. About ten-thirty Sunday night the car left for Carthage. Upon arrival, the place proved to be a lively and good-looking little town. The Clubs stayed at the Hotel Harrington, and sang at the High School during the morning. The evening performance brought to light the worst thing about Carthage; that is to say, its theatre. It was a small and dingy building, offering few conveniences, very dirty, and infested by a gang of toughs and loafers. These made an attempt to steal some of the club members' luggage, but were frustrated by Paul Beckett and Stewart McCormack, self-appointed vigilance committee.

Next day, at Springfield, the boys met an altogether different reception. Kappa Alpha at Drury College received the Clubs in the afternoon, a splendid dinner followed, and the Landers Theatre was all that could be asked. After a most successful performance the men closed the tour by a supper at Hotel Sansone. Speeches were made, songs sung, and a warm and lasting fellowship cemented. Thirty-seven more congenial fellows it would be hard to locate, and thirty-seven truer sons of Washington, impossible to find.

The next morning found the boys back in St. Louis; and ready for the annual Concert.

HAMLET—Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell.—ORCHESTRA.

Musical Clubs' Concert

NOVELTY—that was the chief characteristic of the concert this year. For two months the clubs had worked in accordance with plans perfected by their directors during last summer. The Christmas Holiday tour had put a final polish, a last refinement upon the production. Its corners had been rounded off, its component elements fitted smoothly together, and the personnel of the clubs had achieved that savoir faire upon the stage which gives professional tone. The evening of the twentieth of January found a record audience in the Victoria Theatre, waiting expectantly for the much-discussed first act. It found also some forty men at concert pitch, trained to the minute, and eager to justify the sweeping statements of Verne Gould's advertising.

When the curtain rose, the darkened stage was lighted only by the red glow of a campfire, about which, in the shadows of a Hawaiian glen, lay the singers and the mandolin men, clad in flannels and wearing wreaths of flowers. When the faint melody, played by the Mandolin Club as the curtain rose, had died into silence, Harry Payne sang Aloha Oe, the full strength of the club swelling into the chorus. There followed in quick succession, the quartette in Hawaii, My Queen of the Sea; Reed's bass solo, Un Peu D'Amour; the Mandolin Club in the Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffman (musical critics say they never heard it better played than here), and Ethelbert Nevin's exquisite little melody, Mighty Like a Rose, by the entire Glee Club. The curtain descended upon this, the last of what Verne Gould called "those wierd, sweet songs of languorous Hawaii," and a storm of applause announced the pleasure of the audience.

Upon the rising of the next curtain, Wilbur Groom trotted, and Noble McCormack strode on to the stage, and they commenced a fifteen-minute pianologue, wherein they played in duet with many original variations, a half-dozen of the latest comic opera and ragtime successes. At the end of the pianologue Arch Albert appeared in his feminine impersonation, with the Glee Club Octette, to the tune of "Honeymoon Lane," from The Sunshine Girl. When the Octette song-and-dance was done, Arch Albert and Harold Conrad displayed their agility in a very theatrical tango.

The Mandolin Quartette, composed of Langreck, Russell, Jehle and Hammond, performed, by the aid of small lights attached to their instruments, upon a darkened stage, and their rendition of recent ragtime elicited the most appreciative comment.

Then the quartette appeared, and Payne, Modisette, Green and Reed, sang plantation melodies for some minutes. Mr. Green, in blackface (which is his favorite sport), interpreted Late Hours, with the assistance of the quartette on the chorus.

The third part of the program was of the conventional type which makes up the usual glee club performance.

Prompted by a desire to foster fellowship and co-operation among the graduate students of the various departments of the University, the Graduate Club was organized in October, 1911. The meetings which are held monthly are designed to overcome the narrowing effects of specialization, to provide a medium of social comfort for all advanced students; and to promote a spirit of congeniality.

Series I. The Washington University Record, issued monthly, from November to May, is intended for the entire University constituency: Faculty, Alumni, Students, and friends of the institution. It contains a resumé of the principal activities of the University for the period covered, together with articles, of a non-technical character, on literary and scientific subjects.

Series II. The Catalogues. This series includes the Annual Catalogue of the University, and the catalogues of the various departments of the University.

Series III. The Medical Bulletin consists of reprints of papers by members of the Medical School Faculty.

Series IV. Washington University Studies. This series contains technical articles and monographs of scholarly import.

Series V. Washington University Doctoral Dissertations. This series contains dissertations accepted by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

These seven fraternities are organized as the Pan-Hellenic Association for the purpose of supervising such affairs as concern their common interests. The association gives annually a smoker to which members of the fraternities are invited. It also conducts the Pan-Hellenic Baseball Series for the Drosten trophy. A report of the last series will be found on the next page.

This is an annual series of Baseball games between the fraternities in the Pan-Hellenic Association. Beta Theta Pi, by winning the championship in 1913, gained the right of having its name engraved upon a bronze shield and a silver loving cup, donated by the Drostsen Jewelry Company, and the custody of those trophies for a year. In case a fraternity wins three successive championships, it is entitled to complete possession of the cup.

The Sands of Time

The Drury Debate—Washington's Intercollegiate Debating Team met the representatives of Drury College on April 11 at Founders Hall, Mary Institute. The question debated was, "Resolved: That the Policy of Regulation of Monopoly Is Preferable to That of Prohibition of Monopoly." The Washington team was composed of Arthur Dunham, Harry S. Gleick, Glen H. Mohler and Theodore Leilich. Unfortunately, the Drury team proved the stronger, and Washington lost.

Glee Club Trip to De Soto, Mo.—The Glee Club, assisted by representatives from the Mandolin Club, gave its second out-of-town performance at De Soto, Mo., on the evening of April 18. Thirty-two men, picked from the two clubs, made the trip. The Glee Quartette, in the way of advertisement, rendered some of their most popular songs for the entertainment of the High School. The Concert itself was well attended by the elite of De Soto, who greatly appreciated the humorous specialties of the Glee Club fun-makers. After the show, the hospitality of the residents was manifested in a dance, given at the Elks' Hall.

Pi Phi Tea—The Missouri Beta chapter of Pi Beta Phi gave its annual reception to the University at the home of Miss Mildred De Courcy, on Maple avenue, April 19, 1913. In the dining room, the chapter members took turns in serving delicious cakes, ices and creams, while the pledges, in Dutch costume, served punch. Those in the receiving line were: Misses Erma Perham and Shirley Seifert, Dean McCaulley, and Mmes. Janvier, De Courcy, Koken and White. Autumn leaves, ferns, and red carnations, the chapter flower, which were used in profusion to decorate the rooms, were especially effective.

A. A. Smoker, 1913—Last year's Athletic Association Smoker, held at Francis Gymnasium on the evening of April 23, was the last to be attended by both Dr. Ewerhardt and Coach Cayou in their respective capacities of Medical Adviser and Athletic Director. There were about two hundred and fifty students and alumni present to enjoy the generous supply of free cigars, the vaudeville by Green and Bryan, and the selections of the Glee and Mandolin Clubs, which served to fill in between the various speeches and managers' reports. The talks of Dr. Ewerhardt and Coach Cayou were in the nature of farewell speeches, and sketched various aspects of athletics at Washington during their stay. As a token of the appreciation of their past services, the two men were each presented with a gold watch fob. After the newly elected officers were ushered in, the incoming president adjourned the meeting.

AS YOU LIKE IT—Down on your knees, and thank Heaven, fasting, for a good man's love.—SENTA RETTER.

The Hatchet

McMillan Vaudeville—The McMillan Vaudeville, given April 12, 1913, in the Thyrsus Theatre, proved to be a great success, financially and otherwise. Each of the four sketches was cleverly presented and brought forth a storm of applause from the audience, and especially from that part of the audience which was standing in the doorways, on tables, on chairs, and on each other in its endeavor to see the performance. Kappa Alpha Theta gave a minstrel show, with Emma Thuener and Elsie Hoolan, the "end girls," and Marie Gallenkamp and Senta Retter the soloists. The Kleos' (or shall we say Delta Gam) sketch was entitled "A Feasible Fantasy," in which a typical Freshman's theme was read and the characters therein portrayed by the girls. The dormitory girls presented "Pygmalion and Galatea," while the sketch given by Pi Beta Phi depicted a gypsy camp, with singing, dancing and a whistling duet by Mary Brotherton and Julia Morse.

Dandelion Day—The Class of 1916 may justly feel proud in having been the first to participate in a "Dandelion Day," which was celebrated on April 30, and which is to be an annual institution at Washington University. According to the rules of this new custom, the Freshmen are required to pull up the many dandelions on the Quad, each weed—roots and all—entitling one to ten votes for "the most popular girl in the Freshman Class." After an hour's hard work and eager competition on the part of the Freshmen, Mary Brotherton, with 34,000 votes to her credit, was found to have won the contest—Harriette Newman coming second with a total of 28,000 votes.

Musical Club's Concert, 1913—Following the revival of the Glee Club, the first concert in some years was given on the evening of May 1, 1913, at the Victoria Theatre. Mr. Glenn Lee, the present director, took charge of the club some three weeks before the concert, and his painstaking efforts had their reward in the excellence of the final production. The program was of the conventional type, embracing ensembles, quartettes, solos and mandolin numbers. The solos of Hardaway and Payne were especially remarked. The old quartette, composed of Brodix, Payne, Green and Hardaway, scored one of its usual successes, and the Mandolin Club, under the direction of Harry Stocker, presented a variety of numbers, including a quartette, and a solo by Carl Stifel. Pleasing and difficult numbers were rendered by the Orchestra, which scored great success. In view of the fact that the Club had only been revived some two months before the Concert, the success of the undertaking was gratifying. The harmony and good-fellowship which sprang up among the club members had its lasting effect in the teamwork of the present year's organization.

HAMLET—One may smile and smile and be a villain.—DR. WALKER.

SUFFRAGETTES.

The Univee Surkuss

“ONE STAR LEW’S” skin-game was a sure money grabber “Ten Nights in a Harem” coaxed cash from many a curious one; “Kannie’s Koin Keeper” was well named; “The Slippery Slide” was slicker than ever—and it cost the student body just a little over three hundred dollars to be a collective good sport at the “Univee Surkuss” on May 7, 1913.

There was a corking good Minstrel Show; a “Krazy House,” mysterious and mystifying; a travesty on the immortal “Sun-of-O-Gun;” a doll rack where “favorite” professors might be humbled—three shots for a nickel. (Dr. Heller suffered most, with Madam Buschman a close second.)

And there was a popularity contest—a contest to decide the Queen of the Quad (what more alliteration could any one ask?), and Senta Retter’s home was redolent of American Beauties for a whole week subsequent to the show.

There was everything in the well-lighted, flag-bedecked “Pike” to denote the Gay White Way itself; and what with confetti, horns, toy balloons and pink lemonade, the whole concession made that venerable resort look like a country fair.

Two mammoth street parades—morning and afternoon, announced the appearance of Cora, the captive cloak model; St. Fatima in flesh and blood; Ikey and Jakey in their clever vaudeville sketch; birds and beasts; and many other “wunderful things, ladies and gents, tew numerous to mention.”

Then, of course, Obelisk men paraded as policemen, and were more than efficient.

Nail-driving contests and three-legged races by the girls featured the afternoon performance, Emma Thuener and Carrie Long stumbling their way to victory in the latter.

The main attraction in the night show was the dance in the Gym, preceded by pugilistic encounters between little Boorstin and “Pike County Pete,” and between Ben Moreell and Joe Prensky. The latter bout went to Moreell when he proved to Referee Gould that his opponent’s soiled collar constituted a foul.

Finally, a thrilling moving picture play enacted in real life by Frank Berryhill, Pete Grimm, Paul Coste and Dutch Wilhelmi, capped the climax, and the crowd went home satisfied.

The Hatchet

McMillan Day—The McMillan Day exercises began at 4 o'clock on May 14 in McMillan Court, as is the custom, with an address by the President of McMillan Hall, Margaret Manley, followed by the planting of the ivy by the Vice-President of the Class of 1913, Emma Thuener, with an appropriate response by Rita Monteath, the Vice-President of the Class of 1914.

The May-Day dances took the form of an interpretative pageant, entitled "Spring," and took place on a platform erected for the occasion in the Court. The first dance was by Dorothy Nicholson, as "Winter," who was driven off the stage by "Spring," represented by Rita Monteath, followed by a dance of the wood-nymphs, Marie Bacon, Mildred Fox, Ruth Pickel, Drue Smalling, Helen Stevens and Mary Virginia Thomas. Then followed in close succession dances by Mary Brotherton, as "Rain," and Erma Perham, as "Wind," and a group dance, with Helen Bryars and Alice McClevey as "Sunshine," Alice Ernst and Augusta Parker as "Blue Sky," Mildred Clayton as a "Small White Cloud," and Margaret Winter and Ruby Spurlock as the "Flowers." Then came the dance of the "Golden Butterfly" by Edith Taylor. After this came the Peasants in their dances and the Kate Greenaway Children in various games and dances. Following these was "May," represented by Senta Retter, who at the close of her dance crowned the May Queen, Margaret Manley. The final number was the May-pole dance.

Nothing could be found to criticize, nothing that was not excellent; the dances were acknowledged by almost everyone to have been the prettiest the girls have ever given.

In the afternoon, following the exercises, a reception was held for the relatives and friends of the McMillan Hall girls, and in the evening, after the dances were over, all those who were sufficiently eager to have a good time ventured into the crowded Gymmie where they danced.

Cornerstone Laying—The laying of the cornerstone of the new Medical School buildings took place on the afternoon of May 17. The only speakers on the program were Mr. Robert S. Brookings and the Rev. Dr. James W. Lee. After Dr. Lee had delivered the invocation, Mr. Brookings spoke of the significance of the event in the realization of the hopes of those who have worked to make the improved Medical School a possibility, and who had declared their intention of building the best Medical School in the country, or none at all.

Dr. Lee spoke on "The Inspired Millionaire," discussing the great results obtainable from the contributions of men of wealth when wisely administered.

Senior Week—Mercury climbed to ninety-five degrees at the beginning of 1913 Senior Week and stayed on that perch consistently during every day of graduation process. As a consequence, long black robes were somewhat too heavy and too onerous to give real satisfaction to wearers.

The opening event of the week was the baseball game between the Seniors and the Faculty, May 5. The 1913 men saw in this contest an opportunity to even up the bad marks of the past four years, and they trounced the professors by a 10 to 6 score.

The class Thespians occupied the limelight on the following day, and pleased the audience with "Weatherby of Washington," home-made and full of local hits. Ralph Bryan and Emma Theuner had written into the lines all the important features of the class—all the foibles of the students, and the sketch was a big success.

On Wednesday morning the pilgrimage around the Quad consisted of recapitulations and prophecies by various members of the class stationed at the doorways of the several buildings. Following this, was the annual tree planting, which took place behind Cupples I, where Prof. Calvin M. Woodward, since deceased, presided over the ceremonies.

Class Day exercises in the evening consisted in the reading of the Class History and Will.

On Thursday morning, Dr. Paul E. More, an old graduate, and now the editor of "The Nation," delivered the baccalaureate address to a crowd of twenty-five hundred in the commencement tent on the second Quadrangle. The presentation of diplomas and the awarding of honors completed the exercises.

The Senior Prom, given at the School of Fine Arts Thursday night, was the climax of the week. The pavilion was illuminated by Japanese lanterns—and the running fountains lent an air of quiet and enchantment to the Seniors' last evening together. At midnight the dancers adjourned to the Main Archway, where all the songs that had been sung throughout the four years here were sung once more.

The Alma Mater hymn came last, and the party then adjourned.

The Civil Engineering Trip

THE little town of Green Mountain Falls in the Ute Pass, Colorado, was chosen by the Junior and Senior Civil Engineers as the location for their fall surveying work, so thirteen men, accompanied by Mr. Galt, left St. Louis on September first with their noses towards the west. The crowd arrived in Denver the morning of the third, and left almost immediately for Green Mountain Falls. The party now numbered eighteen, since four more including Professor and Mrs. Sweetser, joined them in Denver.

Having arrived in Green Mountain Falls, the first few days were spent in preliminaries, the Seniors establishing a triangulation system, while the Juniors did stadia work in preparation for a topographical survey. The work consisted of eight hours in the field and two hours computing each day, so that Sunday was the only time left for sight-seeing.

One Sunday, seven of the fellows decided to take a horseback ride; so, hiring horses from a nearby livery barn, they set out about 8 o'clock in the morning in the direction of Colorado Springs, about twenty-five miles distant. When they returned at seven in the evening, they evidenced many signs of not being accustomed to horseback riding. De Vorkin and Suss, who were the last to come straggling in, afforded the fellows awaiting them a great deal of amusement with a recital of the day's events.

The following Sunday, part of the fellows decided to walk up Pike's Peak. Five of them started at 9 o'clock Saturday evening, and three more at four Sunday morning. The first party came in about four Sunday afternoon, more dead than alive, while the others didn't return until Monday evening. Both parties had a hard trip, losing their way frequently and getting caught in a snow storm. The same Sunday, another party took a trip to Cripple Creek in an automobile.

The time passed rapidly, and the date for leaving soon came 'round. The last night the ice house near the lake received our parting attentions, and the dawn of the next morning showed a sign in large black letters, telling who we were and when we had been there.

On the way home, we stopped in Denver again, visited the mint, and took a sixty-mile automobile ride to see some irrigation works in the process of construction. The party now split up, part of them going to Keokuk to see the dam and the hydro-electric plant, while the others went home to take re-exams.

The last of the party arrived in St. Louis just in time for school, thus ending a "C. E." trip which will never be forgotten. As one fellow expressed it, "The Civil Engineers never stop talking about their trip until they take their next one."

OMELET—Sir Roland chews't the international rag.—HISTORY A.

September

ON returning to the University last September, one was doubtless surprised to see the many improvements that had been made on the Campus during the summer.

Among the more important additions were found, a more gradually sloping drive leading to McMillan; the installation of electric lights along each side of the walk from Cupples II to McMillan Hall; a crushed stone walk from the half-way station to the north entrance of University Hall, supplanting the cinder path of former years, which in rainy weather used to consist mostly of large pools of mud and water; and lastly, the wireless telegraphy outfit strung from Eads Halls to Cupples II.

In addition to these improvements on the Campus, there were many other changes in the University. There was a slight increase in enrollment in all departments of the University, with the exception of the Medical School, especially in that of Arts and Sciences, making the total enrollment in the University, exclusive of the secondary schools, about thirteen hundred and fifty. A number of those enrolling for the first time in September had taken previous work in other Universities and Colleges, an evidence of the fact that Washington is progressing towards its goal as one of the most thorough Universities in the country. The Saturday courses had become more and more a feature of the University, which the people of St. Louis are beginning to recognize and to utilize, there being a Saturday enrollment at present of over three hundred.

Owing to the large increase in enrollment, many additions were made to the Faculty, chief among these being: Wm. F. Gephart, Ph. D., who came from Ohio State University to take charge of the Department of Economics; Charles E. Persons, Ph. D., Assistant Professor in Sociology; Harry G. Hake, M. S. E. E., Assistant Professor in Electrical Engineering; Edwin Burt, Ph. D., Associate Professor in Botany and Mycology; Isaac Lippincott, Ph. D., Instructor in Economics; Clinton J. Maseck, A. M., Instructor in English; Garnett G. Sedgewick, Ph. D., Instructor in English, and Joseph C. Stephenson, A. M., Instructor in Zoölogy.

Freshman Dance —The Freshman Dance was given in Francis Gymnasium on the evening of December 16. The decorations were simple but tasteful, consisting of festoons of black and gold crepe paper suspended from one end of the hall to the other. 1917 deserves credit for a very enjoyable evening.

The Flag Rush

THE "scrap" took place on the shore of Black's Creek, about one mile west of Clayton. Realizing the advantages which this particular spot had offered to their opponents in the previous year's fight, the Sophomores decided to erect their defense there, choosing the same tree. It was clearly impracticable to put up their specially-built, 1500-pound steel "bird's nest" between eleven p. m. and four a. m. of the night of December 22; consequently the 1916 men broke the rules, and labored all the afternoon and night of December 21 getting their steel defense in place. As a penalty, the Student Council permitted the Freshmen to approach unmolested to within twenty feet of the platform.

There was very little skirmishing before four A. M. on the eve of the battle. Between four and seven, however, numerous captures were made on both sides. The wagon carrying the Freshman attacking apparatus was stopped in the woods by a band of Sophomores and several of the first year men tied up. Since this was a violation of the special rule, the Student Council disqualified ten Sophomores.

From six o'clock on, the spectators began to swarm out to the scene of the fight, and by seven the muddy amphitheatre surrounding the "Soph. Bird's Nest" was peopled with an audience of fifteen hundred. At the crack of the referee's pistol, the hundred and twenty-odd Freshmen rushed down with their huge wooden horses and long boards and proceeded to construct their offensive platform on a level with that of the Sophomores. They soon had the apparatus firmly erected, despite the slipperiness of the ground and the efforts of the men in the "bird's nest" to dislodge them.

The bands of Soph. Reserves were quickly disposed of by the Freshmen on the ground. Most of these Sophomores were securely tied and left to wallow in the mud, while a few drew their Freshman opponents into the icy creek with them. Meanwhile, charge after charge was being made against the impenetrable steel nest of the Sophomores in the attempt to get the flag, which was fastened around the tree on the level with the defenders; but each time the attackers were repulsed by a shower of blows, the Sophomores wielding their one-inch ropes with merciless accuracy. In hand-to-hand struggles, Freshmen and Sophomores alike were thrown off the platforms.

As the fight progressed, it became evident that the efforts of the Freshmen to wrest the Sophomores from their position were futile; and the hour of nine found them as secure in their stronghold as at the beginning.

KING LEAR—Grace go with you, sir!—JACK WHITE.

St. Fatima's Day—With blare of trumpet and thunder of drum, drawn up in a long column, the Architects celebrated in honor of St. Fatima. They looked like nothing in the heavens above, or the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth. Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of them.

It was the twenty-second of January, when St. Fatima, ground-hog fashion, was to come forth from slumber, pray for her followers, and choose her successor. The procession, having rounded the Quad with bands playing and banners flying, drew up in the middle, surrounded by a crowd. There, the King burned incense, in the shape of a four-foot cigarette, the invocations were made and, at the King's kiss (and the bang of the royal alarm clock) St. Fatima awakened, and arose from her couch.

She admonished Professor Robinson and Professor Abella (who were present in disguise) to bear easily upon her favorites, the Architects, and to flunk none of them.

She chose for her successor Percy Ramsay, and the King laid his robe upon Harry Payne. Then, "Sound the drums!" said the King. The band played, the standard bearers advanced, and the procession wound back to the den of the Architects.

The Annual Bonfire—The annual Bonfire was held this year on the night of February 2, after the examination bugaboo had been met and conquered. Feeling that no particular professor could be singled out for punishment on account of stiff exam questions, the celebrators chose to wreak their vengeance upon the entire Faculty. The coffin bearing the professorial remains was carried by pallbearers past McMillan Hall, where the co-eds added their imprecations against the dead, and on to the vacant lot just southeast of University Hall. Here a twenty-foot funeral pyre had been prepared by the members of Obelisk, the Freshman secret society.

To the accompaniment of solemn chants by the Architects' tin band, the assembled throng fed the blazing pile with text-books until the flames leaped to a height of thirty feet. Then the catafalque was brought beside the fire, the casket was committed to the consuming element and a wicked Faculty went the way of all flesh.

But there was school the next day, somehow or other.

The Theta Tea—The Alpha Iota chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta gave its annual reception to the University on February 22, at the home of Miss Maria Bain. In accordance with the custom of the chapter, its members wore Colonial costumes, even to patches and powdered hair. The rooms were tastefully decorated in pink roses, and excellent refreshments were served. Miss McCaulley, Mrs. Bain, Mrs. T. Horner, Miss Petring and Miss Monteath were in the receiving line.

PROM COMMITTEE

Junior Prom.—Despite the inclemency of the weather, and the new custom of charging admission, a large number of University students and alumni attended the Junior Prom of the Class of 1915, given in Francis Gymnasium on the evening of February the twenty-fourth.

The exquisite decorative features, together with the soft glow of the red lights above, combined to give a most pleasing color effect. Thousands of pink roses, fastened in among the smilax, covered the low ceiling, and almost completely hid the bare walls and somewhat unornamental apparatus around the sides of the Gymnasium. The little summer house of white lattice, where the orchestra played, and the two arches of pink roses and smilax, under which ices and punch were served, helped further to carry out the scheme of a rose bower.

But the most novel idea was that of the four feature dances, each representing a different season. For Spring, there was the singing of birds; for Summer, rose petals were showered down from above, while a large smilax ball, suspended from the center of the ceiling, was opened to let out four white doves. And no less original was Fall, which was represented by a storm with flashes of lightning and peals of thunder; and Winter by the falling of snowflakes and snowballs and by the jingling of sleigh bells. 1915 claims the best Prom. as yet given.

The Suffrage League—The local chapter of the National College Equal Suffrage League was established on March 21. A meeting was held on the steps of University Hall, and addresses were made by Dr. Gephart, of the Economics Department, Prof. Tyrell Williams, of the Law School, and organizers of the Suffrage League. After the addresses, the local chapter was organized, with Mary McDonald, '14, as President; Eleanor Tucker, '15, as President-Elect; Helen Shryock, '15, as Vice-President; Senta Retter, '16, as Treasurer, and Marie Alofs, '17, as Secretary.

A. A. Smoker, 1914—What was generally conceded to be the most interesting annual smoker that the Athletic Association has ever held, took place on the evening of March 26, 1914. Besides the customary speechmaking and musical numbers, there was an athletic program consisting of boxing and wrestling bouts, and an interclass relay race. This last event, which was run in three heats, was won by the class of 1915.

Speeches by Faculty men and students were made before the announcement of the newly-elected association officers.

THE ENGINEERS' PAGEANT

Engineers' Pageant

THE Engineers, on April 1, introduced to the University their newly-acquired patron-saint, the Beaver, giving in his honor "the most stupendous pageant ever staged about the University."

At one o'clock three hundred people awaited the parade. At the blare of a trumpet the Beaver and his followers left their haunt in Cupples II, and wound in procession toward the first Quad. Behind a cornet, a flute, and a bass drum, walked Armin Schleiffarth, High Priest of the Beaver. He was followed by a locomotive driven by Jim Watkins, and accompanied by a crew of greasy, overalled firemen.

The locomotive drew a funeral car, bearing the mortal remains of Casey Jones, the demi-god whom all engineers worship. Casey's weeping family, and six Seniors, as pallbearers, followed the cortege.

The Electrical Engineers were next in line, bearing a huge model of the Keokuk Power Plant, with transmission line, transformer, and an enormous switch.

A slave, robed in black, next bore the Sacred Beaver himself, in a highly ornamental green cage.

The Mechanical Engineers marched as the Foundrymen's Union, and were followed by the Faculty (in disguise), marshalled as a chain gang. The C. E.'s bore an uncompleted Free Bridge, and the Chemical Engineers were represented by a great retort and furnace. The Sophomores carried a large model aeroplane. The Freshmen, in toto, were displayed as the legs of a great green and yellow dragon, forty feet long, boasting a tremendously vile visage and a tremendously mobile tail. Freshman Monroe, with legs at least seven feet long, bestrode the beast, and, by certain mysterious conjurings, and certain other thumps with a board, prevailed upon it to lie down, arise, dance, turn about, and wag its tail, much to the interest and edification of the admiring multitudes.

Sundry other marvels and prodigies were to be seen, as, for instance, a steam engine on two legs, and a ship which was propelled by bellows in the hands of two hoboos, and which sailed down the brick walk over water carefully laid from sprinkling cans in the hands of two other bums.

When the procession had proceeded, with music and shouting, about the Quad, it drew up before the Library Arcade. After a long-winded invocation, the Beaver, through his interpreter, Kenneth Coggeshall, stated his candid opinion of the Faculty, who were successively presented before him. Ceremonial rites were performed over the bones of Casey, the Brave Engineer, and the Seniors were given their diplomas. They then received, at the hands of Bill Holland (who performed the ceremony with a three-foot pipe wrench), knighthood in the Sacred Order of the Beaver.

KING HENRY IV—A Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.—VAN ORNUM.

Some of the Points of Superiority of the New "Multiplex Hammond"

INTERCHANGEABLE TYPE. TWO SETS OF TYPE ARE ALWAYS IN THE ANVIL. INSTANTLY INTERCHANGEABLE. One can be substituted for the other (i. e., Italics for Roman, Greek for English) by merely turning a knob. Thirty languages can be written on the same machine, and over 300 sets of type to choose from can be used.

BEAUTY OF WORK. The action of the HAMMOND differs from that of all other typewriters, in that the printing is done by the blow of the hammer automatically operated by a spring. Every blow is therefore uniform, and the beauty of the written printed characters is UNSURPASSED.

Hammond Typewriters Especially Adapted to Professional Work

DELICATE TOUCH. On the HAMMOND, the only pressure required on the keys is that sufficient to release the escapement.

PORTABILITY. The simplicity of the HAMMOND and the small number of parts make it much lighter than other standard machines of its competitors; and with no sacrifice of strength or durability, makes the ideal typewriter for the traveler.

ADAPTABILITY. One need not be an experienced operator to do beautiful work on the HAMMOND. The uniform impression and the excellence of the characters make the HAMMOND the logical machine for the man who is his own operator. The HAMMOND is the favorite of scholars, literary and professional people.

OPEN END CARRIAGE ACCEPTS ANY WIDTH PAPER. HANDLES CARDS PERFECTLY AND WITHOUT BENDING.

The MULTIPLEX HAMMOND comes in two styles of keyboard, UNIVERSAL and IDEAL. The Universal has the Standard keyboard, while the Ideal has an arrangement of the keys thought to be the most convenient ever devised.

For the writing of Oriental languages (Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Persian, etc.), a REVERSIBLE CARRIAGE machine is necessary. By making a simple adjustment, the carriage will run from left to right instead of from right to left.

A MATHEMATICAL MULTIPLEX with characters representing higher and lower mathematics is furnished, as well as a special aluminum machine in a traveling case.

Ideal Columbia Chair "Absolutely the Best"

Q We have been making Dental Chairs for twenty-five years and have always produced a chair that has met with instant favor. Dentists the world over are using our product, and the majority of graduates from year to year demand our goods.

Our latest pattern, the IDEAL COLUMBIA, is by far the greatest chair we have ever turned out, as it combines all of the good features of previous models together with twelve individual features never before found in our product.

Get frequent demonstrations of this chair. You will find same both interesting and instructive.
